Key-based Software Development Environment: a new paradigm in application development. KeyMacro is the first developer to provide a pure software keystroke-based interface for application development. KeyMacro facilitates the development of Windows applications by allowing the user to access key-stroke features through the keyboard. Most programmers rely on a mouse or the GUI (Graphical User Interface) for the creation of applications. A mouse is a device that enables you to select and move objects on a computer screen. You can also change the application or file you are working on by double clicking on an object. KeyMacro is a keyboard-only application and does not depend on a mouse to operate. All actions are performed using the keyboard. KeyMacro is a software development platform that includes an intuitive programming language and a simple graphical user interface. The KeyMacro programming language makes it easy to write new applications. Your code is typed directly into the KeyMacro programming language, not into a text file, which reduces the amount of programming required. KeyMacro programs are created by writing code in KeyMacro's easy-to-learn programming language and use simple graphical objects that are always available.
